Statement of Australian Human Research Ethics Committee Compliance

The Australian Human Research Ethics Committee reviewing this study is duly constituted and operates in accordance with applicable Australian requirements for the ethical review of human research. The Committee permits only members who are independent of the investigator and sponsor, and who do not have a conflicting interest in the study, to participate in the review, deliberation, or approval of the study. The Committee maintains written procedures for the initial review, continuing review, amendment review, and safety-related review of human research protocols. Where applicable, the Committee's review and oversight are conducted in accordance with the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research, the Declaration of Helsinki, ICH Good Clinical Practice as adopted in Australia, Therapeutic Goods Administration requirements, and applicable Commonwealth, state, and territory laws.
